Scan this  or go to you Tube and type '148 Transportation - Mandarin Chinese' in the  bar. Listen again and pay special attention to the aeroplane and ship.

Let's try to learn ^{fēijī} 飞机 (aeroplane) and ^{chuán} 船 (ship) today.

飞机 is made up of 飞 (fly) and 机 (engine) which means the vehicle that has the engine to fly in the sky. Picture the character 飞 as a bird flying with the wings on its back. This is another example of putting two characters together to form a new expression.

Let's practise writing the keyword for 'aeroplane'.

In the YouTube video the ship is ^{lúnchuán} 轮船. To make it simple and easier to remember we can just say ^{chuán} 船. The left-hand side of the character ^{zhōu} 舟 is a character itself which means a small boat. It has the same pronunciation as ^{zhōu} 州 which means 'state'. Do you remember we learned it in Term 1? Do not confuse them as they look totally different.

Let's practise writing the keywords for 'ship'.
